Welcome to our mid-year 2024 Private Equity Outlook.

As part of our commitment to providing timely and insightful commentary and analysis for industry players, we're pleased to present this review of the market, a look at legal trends, and our forecast for H2 2024.

State of the Market

An Update on Private Equity M&A in Canada >

The M&A market – and particularly mid-market private equity M&A – remains uncertain. This article looks at H1 2024 results, a forecast for H2 2024, and legal trends from across the industry.

What We're Reading

A Better Approach to Mergers and Acquisitions >

Key Takeaways: The odds of failure have been inverted. In the original study (from 20 years ago), 70% of deals surveyed were classified as failures. In the new study, 70% of the deals succeeded. (Other studies have displayed less dramatic improvements, but still a positive trend over the past 20 years.) Why is that the case? Acquiring companies use M&A to pursue a broader range of strategies and acquirers are more sophisticated in their due diligence. From the legal perspective alone, the array of searches, investigations (leveraging “clean teams”) and practice areas that are deployed on many deals has expanded significantly. More deals also means more experience and expertise, which includes the development of full-time M&A professionals. Finally, because buyers are better at integration. A key finding of the report indicates that companies that complete at least one acquisition per year earn double “the returns” earned by those that rarely or never do deals.

Private Equity Needs a New Talent Strategy >

Key Takeaways: Investors can no longer rely solely on financial engineering—such as leveraging debt to generate returns on underperforming assets—to secure superior returns. Market dynamics have shifted. Now, portfolio companies must be driven by exceptional leaders and capable managers focused on execution. Research by the Institute for Private Capital indicates that since 2010, operational improvements (revenue growth and increasing margins) have generated 47% of value creation, up from 18% in the 1980s. Meanwhile, gains from financial tactics have decreased from 51% to 25%. As such, PE must emphasize leadership effectiveness as the key to value creation. To maximize returns, successful firms need to prioritize hiring skilled human capital managers, develop a leadership strategy, incorporate leadership assessments early, and drive such changes from the beginning of any deal.

Hidden Potential: The Science of Achieving Greater Things >

Synopsis: In his latest work, distinguished organizational psychologist Adam Grant masterfully combines ground-breaking research and compelling narratives to show that progress depends less on how hard we work than how well we learn. In his new book, Hidden Potential, Grant explores how to build the character skills and motivational structures to realize our potential, and how to design systems that create opportunities for those who have been underrated and overlooked.
