Biography

Corina Capmare is an associate in the Banking & Specialty Finance Group at Cassels. Corina's practice focuses on corporate and commercial law, representing both lenders and borrowers involved in domestic and cross-border financing transactions and corporate finance matters. Before becoming an associate at Cassels, Corina summered and articulated at the firm. During law school, she joined the Queen's Business Law Clinic as a caseworker, assisting entrepreneurs with a variety of corporate matters.

Corina graduated from the J.D. program at Queen's University. While there, she was awarded the Queen's Law Prize in Alternative Dispute Resolution for achieving top standing in her class. Additionally, Corina was an active member of her student community as a volunteer for both Pro Bono Students Canada and the Queen's Literacy Outreach program.

Prior to law school, Corina graduated with an Honours Bachelor of Arts in Media, Information, and Technoculture from Western University, and went on to complete a Post-Graduate Certificate in Public Relations from Humber College. She worked in the Public Relations industry in various capacities, including reputation and crisis management, media relations and social media community development.
