Biography

Nicole Teehan (she/her/hers) is the Director of Professional Resources, Learning & Development at Cassels. In this role, Nicole is responsible for administering the firm's national training and development program for associates and students. Nicole is passionate about professional development and lifelong learning. She completed a Master of Laws at Dalhousie University, focusing her research on administrative law and alternative dispute resolution processes. For almost a decade, she has taught the theory and practice of negotiation as an adjunct faculty member at her alma mater, Osgoode Hall Law School.

Nicole summered and articulated with a large full-service Bay Street law firm. Following her call to the Bar in 2010, she returned to firm's litigation and dispute resolution group. Since 2012, she has focused her career on legal professional development, skills training and adult education.
